The first of these is the fact that the number of species of plants and animals which are found in the tropics is much greater than in the temperate regions.
This is due to the fact that the tropics are much warmer and have a much longer growing season than the temperate regions. The second fact is that the
tropics are much more diverse in their climate than the temperate regions. This is due to the fact that the tropics are much larger and have a much greater variety of terrain than the temperate regions. The third fact is that the tropics are much more humid than the temperate regions. This is due to the fact that the tropics are much closer to the equator and have a much higher average temperature than the temperate regions. The fourth fact is
more fertile than the temperate
fact that the tropics have a
much higher average rainfall than the temperate regions.
The fifth fact is that the
biologically diverse than the temperate regions. This is due to the fact that the tropics have a much longer history of life than the temperate regions. The sixth fact is that the tropics are much more stable than the
tropics are much less affected by seasonal changes than the temperate regions. The seventh
much more productive than
tropics have a much higher average temperature and a much longer growing season
than the temperate regions.
The eighth fact is that the
resilient than the temperate
and a much higher average
regions. The ninth fact is
more diverse in their ecosystems than the temperate
much greater variety of terrain and a much longer history of life than the temperate regions. The tenth fact is
more important to the world economy than the temperate
fact that the tropics are the source of many of the world's most important commodities, such as rubber, sugar, and oil. The eleventh fact is
more important to the world's culture than the temperate
most important cultural traditions, such as the African and Latin American cultures. The twelfth fact is that the tropics are much more important to the world's environment than the temperate
most important natural resources, such as the Amazon rain forest and the Great Barrier Reef.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written in dark ink on aged, yellowish paper. The script is dense and fills most of the page, with some lines appearing slightly faded or obscured by ink bleed-through from the reverse side. The handwriting is characteristic of the 17th or 18th century, with long, flowing letters and frequent use of ligatures. The text is organized into several paragraphs, with some lines starting with capital letters. The overall appearance is that of a well-preserved but aged historical record.
